Most of them come to spend time by the sea, taking advantage of the many pristine nearby beaches that turn out to be too tempting during the sweltering summer months. However, there are many other attractions in this attractive colonial city. Here's our election. Tyrone National Park in Colombia © Olga Cote Photo / ShutterstockPost. Truly pristine beach holiday? Then head from the city to the stunning Tyrone National Park. Here are the lush landscapes of the jungle edge in wa to the white sandy beaches and turquoise water for which the park is famous. Located near the Caribbean Sea, these are some of the best beaches in all of South America. Known as Ciudad Perdida by locals, this wonderful citadel of indigenous peoples is up to the Inca date and is a thrilling sight to behold among such exotic jungle terrain. Not for the faint of heart, a visit to archaeological sites requires a grueling four- to five-day trek through the unforgiving terrain. Lost City, Santa Marta Columbia © Andrew Hyde/Flickr Right after a nice nearby beach to pull up a towel? Then jump on the ferry and head to the beautiful Playa Blanca. Located on the other side of the cape just a short drive from the city, this pristine stretch of sand is lined with a number of major local restaurants but still manages to feel miles from the big city. Playa Blanca, Santa Marta, Magdalena, Colombia southern suburb of El Rodadero really warms up during the summer months and long weekends when dozens of Colombians from all over the country come to cool down on the beach during the day and drink and dance until they fall at night. In this electric area, live musicians and beach bars are the main nightlife attractions. It's the capital. The department and the fourth largest city of the Caribbean region of Colombia, after Barranquilla, Cartagena and Soledad. Founded on July 29, 1525 by The Spanish conqueror Rodrigo de Bastidas, it was the first Spanish settlement in Colombia, its oldest surviving city, and the second oldest in South America. This city is located on the bay of the same name and as such, it is the main tourist destination in the Caribbean region. History of pre-Columbian times Additional information: Pre-Columbian era Before the arrival of Europeans, the South American continent was inhabited by a number of indigenous groups. Due to the combination of tropical weather, significant precipitation, and the destruction and distortion of many records by Spanish conquistadors, our understanding of the peoples of this region is limited. Tyrone has formed medium and large settlements consisting of stone paths, terraces, protected waterways and spaces designed for agricultural products. Their economy was mostly agricultural, growing corn, pineapple, yucca and other local foodstuffs. The Tyrones are considered quite advanced for their time period. Surviving archaeological sites consisted of formed terraces and small underground stone canals. It is also known that they actively collect and process salt, which is an important trade commodity. We know that they traded with other indigenous groups along the coast and the interior. Archaeological excavations have uncovered significant works in ceramics, masonry and gold. The flag of Santa Marta consists of two colors: white and blue. White symbolizes peace, in that everyone is united without restrictions. Blue symbolizes the sky, the sea, the magic found on the horizon, and the snow-capped Sierra Nevada mountains. Geography Vista satelital de la Sierra Nevada de Santa Marta. Santa Marta is located on the Gulf of Santa Marta of the Caribbean Sea in the province of Magdalena. It is 992 km from Bogota and 93 km from Barranquilla. It borders the Caribbean and the south with the municipalities of Arakataka and Xienaga in the north and west. The economy of Santa Marta economy is based on tourism, trade, port activities, fisheries and agriculture, in this order. The main agricultural products are: bananas, coffee, cocoa and cassava. The Santa Marta Infrastructure is a major port. Simon Bolivar International Airport (ATA: SMR) is 10 km from the city centre. The historical figure Simon Bolivar died here, which was a significant event for South America as a whole. His villa, known as La Kinta de San Pedro Alejandrino, is located just outside the city centre. Since the main city centre is located close to the coast, the city itself has difficulty controlling the expansion. Although technically a separate inhabited day, Rodadero is often considered part of Santa Marta itself.
